

Howard Norton Cook, Steel Industry (detail), 1936, United States Post Office and Courthouse, Pittsburgh, PA. Courtesy of the General Services Administration, Fine Arts Program

In 1933, the administration of President Franklin Roosevelt launched an ambitious program to place murals and sculptures in post offices across the country, including Pennsylvania. To coincide with the national 75th anniversary of the New Deal, The State Museum of Pennsylvania announces a special exhibition that will offer visitors a glimpse of some of these extraordinary artworks, brought together for the first time.
